

I believe you should do everything in your power to move forward with the implementation of Broadband over Power Lines. I work for an educational institution and oversee many technology issues that plague our system. But because I live less than .5 miles from the last termination point for broadband cable and with DSL not even within range, I am unable to receive high speed internet that would comply with my needs to take care of emergencies at work, from home. This absence causes a great deal of stress and disfunctionality in our system. Please move forward with the ruling and allow those of us who leave miles and miles away, or even less than half a mile away, like myself, to broadband access but are denied access due to the duopoly of cable and DSL wanting thousands of dollars just to run fiber-optics that would benefit a community greatly.
